How to make the most of a conversation class (with an eye on CLIL)

In an ideal conversation class, every student does lots of speaking, no one is left out, the vocabulary is constantly recycled to improve the chances that it will be acquired, and students learn something useful about the wider world. This workshop shows how to achieve that ideal using some purposely created materials that give students a thoroughly-practised vocabulary of 700 words and at the same time teach geography and environmental awareness, with specific attention to global warming. The speaker will approach the issue through an adventure story: five students from different countries travel to the distant future to see what the world will be like when the polar ice has melted. He uses it in several middle schools, but the concept can be extended to other schools.

The Shooting in Sorrento - A New Butler and Bartorelli Mystery

Val Culley, the author of "Death in the High City", a crime story set in Bergamo, is back with her new novel "The Shooting in Sorrento". She will talk about her detective duo Kate Butler, a freelance journalist, and Steve Bartorelli, a retired Detective Chief Inspector of Italian descent, who get involved in another mystery, this time in Sorrento. The book is currently available as a Kindle edition, but can also be read on smartphones, tablets and computers using Amazon's free Kindle app. A good opportunity for students to become familiar with a new way of reading.

Revised Cambridge English Young Learners tests from January 2018

This workshop will give an overview of the changes to the Young Learners exams coming into effect in January 2018. We will start this workshop by providing some background information on the revision process before describing the small number of changes made to the question papers and the rationale for these changes. We will then discuss the new writing assessment scales, developed for the new writing tasks for Movers and Flyers; the updated speaking assessment scales; and the changes made to results reporting. There will materials to take away.

Seminar with Richard Twigg, teacher trainer
